

I subscribed to XM Radio over 2 years ago. XM provides crystal clear reception anywhere I go. XM channels are not bound to specific programming and time frames, which allows for much more variety, and mainly: music that I want to listen to when I want to listen to it. XM Radio is not mired in commercials, traffic and weather information is available when I need it, and the information is specific to my area. I don't listen to regular radio very much anymore because it has much less to offer me. I prefer to pay a small fee for the variety, information, and clarity that XM offers. Since I am paying for the service, I urge the FCC to consider what is at stake for people like me who choose XM, and not allow someone else to decide what is best for me and others.
